

WOMAN DROWNS IN BATHTUB; A SUICIDE AT THE AGE OF 84

Mrs. Elizabeth Link is Found Dead After Doors Are Broken Through

NO REASON KNOWN

Had Gotten Into Tub Fully Clothed, and Turned Faucet On

NESHAMINY FALLS, July 17.—An aged woman was found dead in the bathtub at the home of her nephew, George Jones, here, late last evening. The woman, Mrs. Elizabeth Link, 84, had met death by drowning and the verdict of Deputy Coroner W. Furman Young, of Bristol, was that death was due to suicide.

Mrs. Link resided in Philadelphia but usually made her home with her nephew during the summer months. She had been at the Jones house for several weeks and yesterday the Jones family went to Philadelphia, leaving the aged woman alone.

After arriving in Philadelphia a telephone call was made to the Jones home so as to see if Mrs. Link was all right. No answer was received. Other calls were made during the day and neighbors were also summoned to the phone and asked by Mr. Jones if they would go and see if his aged relative was well.

The house was locked and no one could gain admittance so finally the State Police were called and Mr. Jones started for his home. Both arrived at about the same hour and after breaking open the door of the bathroom the woman was found lying in the tub which was filled with water.

Mrs. Link was a large woman weighing nearly 200 pounds. She had gotten into the tub fully clothed and with her head directly beneath the spigot turned the water on. After the water was of sufficient depth to cover her body Mrs. Link closed the spigot.

She had even locked the door of the bathroom on the inside.

No reason can be assigned for her action as she had never expressed any dissatisfaction with her surroundings and her wants were always catered to by her relatives.

Mrs. Annie Singer Rests Here After Gaining Injuries

Mrs. Annie Singer, who was injured in Philadelphia, Sunday evening, is now at the home of her son, John Singer, Spruce street.

The Bristol woman was with a group upon a car which developed trouble after it entered the subway. It was necessary for the occupants to walk through the subway for a short distance in the dark to reach the street. Some were hurt when they fell where a drop of nearly two feet occurred, Mrs. Singer being one of the group. She sustained injuries of her lower limbs, bruises upon the back, side and one arm. It has not been determined yet if any ones are broken.

Mrs. Singer was taken to the Hahnemann Hospital, and later brought to Bristol.

SOLIDARITY QUESTION IS RIDDLE OF SOUTH

Expect Answer in Fall, When Crops Have Been Put Away

DOUBT SOME STATES

By Henry Lesesne

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

ATLANTA, Ga., July 17.—It is cotton-picking and campaigning time in Dixie, and when the crops are put away this fall, the paramount question—"Will the South return to its proverbial solidarity?"—will have been answered definitely and decisively for some time to come.

The riddle already has been answered with emphatic affirmativeness by one of the three states of the Southeast which bolted the democracy of their forefathers two years ago.

North Carolina, which until 1928 had not gone into the Republican column since reconstruction days, has come back into the fold of rock-ribbed Democracy and in so doing has decapitated Senator F. M. Simmons, the boss of the state machine for 25 years who hoisted the red flag of insurgency to carry North Carolina for Hoover.

By defeating the venerable senator for re-election by a margin of 75,000, J. W. Bailey, a Baptist dry, who based his campaign exclusively on the issue of that Democratic bugaboo—party regularity—confirmed the belief of "regular" leaders that the 1928 desertion was but a temporary fling.

And now that the Democrats have returned so solidly to the ranks, Democratic nomination in North Carolina, astute political observers concede, will again be equivalent to election. Although Republican leaders hope to corral enough disgruntled Simmons sympathizers to pile up a sizeable vote for their nominee, George M. Pritchard, it can, admittedly, be but a gesture.

It remains to be seen whether Virginia and Alabama, the other states that went "Hoovercratic" in 1928, will follow in the footsteps of the Old North State. Forthcoming elections of these states will determine the relative strength of the party regulars and the 1928 dissenters. Democratic organizations in both states are confident that the bolters of Governor Al Smith will return to the party since they accomplished the purpose for which they deserted—that is, the defeat of the Democratic nominee.

Virginia will occupy the spotlight August 5th when the Democratic Primary is held. Senator Carter Glass is out for re-election and his nomination by the Democrats is generally conceded. However, he will have a Republican candidate to contend with in November, and this Republican candidate will have the support of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., and his anti-Smith following. The Cannon faction thought still a formidable force, is admittedly weaker politically now than it was a year ago.

While the situation in Alabama is fundamentally the same as that which now confronts Virginia, and that which North Carolina has already passed, the three-ring circus in the ballroom of Tom Heflin has been crushed up with a few more daubs of color, "Cotton Tom" himself furnishing most of the pyrotechnics. Heflin, like Simmons, was an arch-foe of Al Smith in the South.

Heflin has been outlawed from the Democratic party in his state for his 1928 insurgency and is running on an independent ticket. Nothing is conceded in Alabama just now, and the race, it appears, will be close. Heflin will be opposed by the Democratic candidate nominated in the August 12 primary. The two candidates for the Democratic nomination are John Bankhead, Birmingham attorney, and Frederick I. Thompson, Mobile newspaper publisher and former member of the shipping board.

In lusty little South Carolina, another picturesque figure—Cole L. Blease—is seeking re-election to the

Potato Growers' Association to Meet at National Farm School on July 29th and 30th—Newtown Resident Refuses to Pay Fine for Not Stopping at "Stop" Sign—Point Pleasant Fisherman Lands 40-lb Snapper in Tohickon Creek

The Bucks County Potato Growers' Association is planning the biggest agricultural event of the year for Bucks County. This will be a two-day potato meeting, July 29 and 30 at the National Farm School, Doylestown.

Sixteen counties in southeastern Pennsylvania are planning to bring tours of potato growers. It is expected that 6,000 people will attend on the two days.

Delaware, Montgomery, Lehigh, Cumberland, Philadelphia, Lebanon, Berks, Franklin, Carbon, Bucks, will be represented on July 29th.

Schnylkill, Lancaster, York, Northampton, Dauphin, Chester, Lackawanna will be present on the 30th.

Twelve commercial companies will bring exhibits of potato machinery and equipment for exhibition and demonstration.

There will be time slacking demonstrations and demonstrations on the adjustment of spray nozzles.

Dr. E. L. Nixon, State College, potato expert, will be the principal speaker on potato growing.

Several of the nearby counties are planning to make stops at local farms to inspect potato fields before viewing the 20 acres of potatoes at the Farm School and the machinery exhibit.

Defective wiring in an automobile, it is believed, was the cause of a blaze which brought the Newtown fire company into action. The fire was confined to the garage owned by William T. Wright and was leased by William J. Ellis.

Mr. Wright owns a number of garages adjoining the Friends' meeting house grounds which he leases to residents of the borough and it was in one of these that the fire was discovered.

Flames were shooting from the structure when the fire was discovered. The car belonging to Mr. Ellis was destroyed.

Firemen responded very quickly and succeeded in confining the flames to the one garage, although both garages on either side of the garage in which Mr. Ellis kept his car were badly charred.

Refusing to pay a fine of $2.50 on a charge of failing to bring his automobile to a halt when coming to a "stop" sign in the borough, John Barone, of Newtown, has posted $20 to appear at the county court to answer the charges.

This borough recently erected a number of "stop" signs on streets leading into State street. Borough

PUBLIC SERVICE TO BUILD RIVER DOCK

Plans Big Project for Burlington Plant Which Is to Be Expanded

WORK TO START SOON

Carrying out its plans for the erection of a $50,000,000 generating plant at Burlington, N. J., the Public Service Electric and Gas Company will construct an extensive dock and coal tower in the Delaware River at that place. Announcement of the proposed docks and tower improvement was made today by the United States War Department engineers, to whom the Public Service Corporation has made application for the necessary Federal permit to complete the work.

Plans describing the project have been filed with the engineers of the Philadelphia District and notices have been forwarded to the officials of interested municipalities along the Delaware River route in order to learn if protests are contemplated from the standpoint of navigation.

The program of the Public Service Electric and Gas Company for the construction of this coal tower and modern wharf calls for a large outlay of money, and when completed the project will materially add to the total tonnage that now is transported over the navigable river channel. The company intends to ship great cargoes of coal on the Delaware to its Burlington plant, as the new tower will be constructed to accommodate large reserve supplies. The corporation has had the improvement under contemplation for a long time, but withheld its final decision until authorization was given by the United States Government to deepen the river channel to 20 feet.

Emilie Y. M. A. forfeited to the Hibernians last night when only seven players put in an appearance on St. Ann's field. Umpire John Elmer awarded the game to the A. O. H. team by the score of 9-0. As the result of the forfeiture the Hibernians now occupy undisputed possession of first place in the league.

Not to disappoint the large crowd that gathered to see the usual twilight baseball game, the Emilie team picked two players from the spectators and played an exhibition game with the "Hibs" and were quite successful in their venture. The boys pounded the offerings of Gene Lawler for fifteen safe smacks and scored nine times for an easy 9-4 victory.

"Ike" Watson did the mound toil for the Emilies and made a good job of it. He held the Hibernians to five hits and with the exception of the fifth and seventh never was in any real danger. The hurler was also the leader with the bludgeon, smothering three safe hits in four trips to the plate, one being a double.

"Jimmy" Cooper, one of the borrowed players performed well in the field as well as getting three hits as his part of the doling of the downfall of the "Hibs."

Every player on the Emilie team hit safely at least once. Besides the two

George W. Ettenger Dies;
Active As A Fireman

NEWTOWN, July 17.—George W. Ettenger, aged 63, one of the charter members of the Newtown Fire Company and who was closely identified with state and county firemen's associations, died at his home here Tuesday after an illness of 18 months.

Besides being interested in the activities of fire companies, Mr. Ettenger took an active interest in the affairs of his community. He was responsible to a large degree for the building of a trolley line from this place to Bristol.

The deceased was a son of the late Harrison S. and Mary Ann Mannington Ettenger and was born in Middletown township. Following the trade of engineer, Mr. Ettenger was the first engineer of the Newtown Electric Light Company and for 15 years he was the chief engineer of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania Transit Company.

Besides being a charter member of the Newtown Fire Company, the deceased at one time was the chief of the company and at the time of his death was one of the fire company's trustees. He also at one time was a trustee of the Bucks County Firemen's Association.

Mr. Ettenger held membership also with the State Firemen's Association, the Keystone Fire Chiefs' Association of Pennsylvania and the Eastern Association of Fire Chiefs. He was also a member of Packer's Tribe, No. 342, I. O. R. M., South Langhorne. The deceased was a member of the finance committee for the Newtown Gymnasium Fund.

Besides his wife, Elizabeth, Mr. Ettenger is survived by five children, Harrison, Newtown; Thomas, Doylestown; Mrs. Leon Moser, Hulmeville; Mrs. Russell Overholt, Elizabeth, N. J.; and William, who resides at home; a brother, William Ettenger, Morrisville, and two sisters, Mrs. Annie Matthews, Ivyland, and Mrs. Samuel Need, Newtown.

MEXICAN BEAN BEETLE CAUSING MUCH DAMAGE

County Farm Agent Warns
Growers of Ravages of The Pest

OFTEN KILL THE PLANTS

DOYLESTOWN, July 17.—"Bean growers of Bucks County have not been paying sufficient attention to the Mexican bean beetle," County Farm Agent William F. Greenwalt said this morning in discussing the ravages of the pest.

"I find that very few growers have been awake to the necessity for spraying and dusting to stop the damage the beetles have been doing," he added. "When possible the spraying should be done before the vines are bearing."

The adult beetles are yellow to copper in color and have 16 black spots on the wing covers. They look like beetles commonly known as "lady birds." The eggs are yellow and are laid in masses on the under sides of the bean leaves.

Bean leaves are skeletonized; that is, the tissue is entirely eaten except the network of veins. Sections are eaten out of the pods, or pits may be eaten in their surfaces. Where both beetle and larvae are feeding on the leaves, injury is so severe that the plants are often killed.

Control practices include spraying or dusting the plants with a quick acting arsenical. Because the foliage of the bean plant is very susceptible to arsenical injury the materials should be used cautiously.

One dusting formula consists of one pound of high grade calcium arsenate and seven pounds of hydrated lime. Another is composed of one pound of magnesium arsenate and five pounds of hydrated lime. The poison should be dusted on the under side of the leaves on a calm day. Four or five treatments ten days apart are sufficient protection.

Liquid sprays are made as follows: calcium arsenate, three quarters of a pound; hydrated lime, one and a half ounce; water, three gallons. For larger quantities the proportions are as follows: Calcium arsenate, three quarters of a pound; hydrated lime, one and a half pounds; water, 50 gallons. The treatment is started as soon as eggs are found on the plants.

TYNDALL, TEST PILOT, KILLED IN SOUTH

Was Located at Keystone
Plant Here for Two Years

CRASHED TO THE EARTH

F. B. Tyndall, United States Army pilot, killed near Mooresville, North Carolina, Tuesday night when his monoplane crashed into a patch of woods, served from 1925 to 1927 as test pilot at the Keystone Aircraft Corporation's plant here.

The flier had an exceptional record as an army pilot, and because of his achievements had served as Air Corps representative at several other plane manufacturing plants before being assigned to Bristol.

At the expiration of his time at the Keystone plant, Tyndall was sent to Langley Field, Virginia, from which field he was flying when the tragedy occurred.

He had been flying in the vicinity of Mooresville for more than an hour before the plane was seen to career to earth. According to a press report, the plane landed in some trees and crashed through the limbs to the earth.

Tyndall was definitely identified by the name woven on the inside of his regulation army flying uniform. His skull was crushed and his body badly mutilated. Fearing there may have been a passenger in the ship at the time of the crash, a search was made without success for the second body.

Goldsborough Dies As Result of Plane Crash

Frank Goldsborough, junior champion trans-continental flier, who was to stop here tomorrow afternoon as guest of the Bristol Exchange Club, died late yesterday at Bennington, Vt.

The 19-year-old pilot never regained consciousness after lying insensible in the wreckage of his plane for 18 hours after it crashed into Woodford Mountain, Tuesday.

He grew weaker throughout the day and his stepmother, Mrs. Gertrude Goldsborough, of Jackson Heights, L. I., was notified. She arrived at his bedside two minutes after he died.

Thus the lad who had striven to emulate his father, Brice Goldsborough, by becoming a great flier, followed him in death. The father was lost in an attempt to fly Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson's Dawn across the Atlantic.

Young Goldsborough and Donald Mockler ran into dense fog over the Woodford Mountain, Vermont.

They tried to dive under it but plunged to the ground, pinning Goldsborough under the wreckage.

Mockler, crawling free, tried vainly to free the pilot. Then he set out through the wilderness of woods and swamp to get help.

At daybreak, a mountaineer and hunter led five companions to the stricken youth. With great difficulty he was brought to the Putnam Memorial Hospital.

He suffered a relapse early yesterday afternoon and never recovered.

BRIDGE ROADWAY ON N. J. SIDE IS GIVEN APPROVAL

Bids Received for Construction of Connecting Link
At Burlington

WORK IS PROGRESSING

Four Piers on Bristol Side of Span Are Practically Completed

Nine bids were received by the New Jersey State Highway Commission for the construction of a connecting link between Route 25, at Burlington, N. J., and the plaza of the Burlington-Bristol bridge. Edward H. Ellis, of Westville, was low with a price of $52,850. Award of the contract was deferred. This will be one of the approaches to the span, work upon which is progressing rapidly.

Burlington Council cooperated in the work of building the Burlington-Bristol Bridge when it approved the plans of the State Highway Commission to construct a road across the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at grade in West Burlington. The road in question will be known as Route S-25 and will lead from the Reed street end of the bridge across to the State Highway.

Originally it was intended to carry the road over the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks on a steel structure, but this was declared to be impracticable by the Railroad Company because it is the intention of the company to eliminate every grade crossing in Burlington during the next ten years, most likely in five years, and that it would be useless to build a steel structure only to tear it down again.

The crossing will be located west of Ellis street. Work on the bridge route will begin at once. The road will be built by Mr. Ellis, the man who has the contract for widening Ashton street.

The bridge road will be more than a road; it will be a boulevard. It is expected that residences will be built on both sides of it, and that it will add much to the beauty and growth of the town.

Four piers on the Bristol side of the river are practically completed, the concrete is in place for a pier on the Burlington side, and foundations are being placed for one of the piers that will support one end of the 540-foot lift

IT NEVER PAYS

Fortunate indeed is the club or organization or town which does not have that individual who will take an unethical advantage.

On the school ground he is the lad that will always be found in the shove for the inside track. He is the fellow whom the referee on the football field must watch for constant off-side plays. On the cinder track tryouts he does his best to get off just a second ahead of the gun. Later when he plays golf, he is the bird who seeks a better lie, claiming a wagon wheel or horse hoof has left an unnatural depression.

In politics or business or professional life, he can never be counted on to carry through with associates or competitors. When they plan to do something as an association or as a community they always look to him to pull something that is just a little off form and he seldom disappoints them. Naturally he is unpopular with his contemporaries and competitors for his unethical actions pique them, but they are seldom hurt a great deal by his unfairness, for the public these days is just a little quicker than ever before to spot unfairness and to reason that if a man is unfair in his competition, he will bear close watching in his dealings with customers and clients.

Taking unfair advantage never pays permanently.

VEGETABLE EATERS

Carload shipments of cabbages, carrots, cauliflower, celery, cucumbers, grapefruit, grapes, lettuce, spinach, tomatoes, turnips and rutabagas rose from a total of 691,941 in 1920 to 1,068,666 in 1929, federal department of agriculture experts advise the nation.

That is good news for farmers, especially those profiting from the rich vegetable and fruit harvests, but it has another significance the layman is apt to overlook or underestimate.

Better health is one of the rewards to the nation from eating more fruit and vegetables. Lettuce, celery and spinach are particularly rich in vitamins. Health experts characterize this change as "a more intelligent choice of food."

More vegetables and fruits and less meat are finding their way to the American dinner table for two reasons. One, and a most effective one, is the rising cost of meat, especially beef. Another reason is the dissemination of the dietetical theory that vegetables are indispensable to the human system under modern conditions of living and that for many years the average American ate too much meat.

There has been a decrease in the per capita consumption of beef from 63 pounds to 51 pounds during the period that the products of garden, dairy and orchard have come in for a larger appreciation.

The original hard luck guy is the youth who married the girl to get his "frat" pin back and found she had lost it.

SYNOPSIS

Fair-skinned Dawn, mystery girl, is about to be burned alive by the black tribe, in the territory of the British East African Protectorate. Her crime is that she has failed, as the mystic wife of the black god Malungu, to divert the drought that is killing the crops. She has discovered that she is a white girl, not black. Her sweetheart, Tom Allen, by a ruse ordered to England, has returned as a Captain. Responsible for the trick was Shep Keyes, whipman and bully of the natives, who thought his chances with Dawn better. Tom dispatched. Now Shep, having induced the natives to burn her, tells Dawn he will save her if she will escape to the jungle with him.

INSTALLMENT THIRTY-ONE

"Then there remains but one thing to do," Tom decided. "I shall go at once to Mombasa and find Mooda."

"But it may take you weeks to locate her," said the Colonel. "The time is short. I grieve to remind you of it, but the girl's execution is set for the day after tomorrow."

"All the more reason why I should hasten to Mombasa. As things now stand, the statement of Mooda alone can save her from this unspeakable fate. I don't believe, sir, that I shall have a great deal of difficulty in finding Mooda. My friend Pigeon, here in the garrison, is well acquainted with the lowly dives of that city. He is likely to know where she went."

"Very good," approved the Colonel. "Your friend Pigeon shall go with you. I am genuinely sorry I cannot spare you a guard, but we may need every white man we have before this trouble is over."

He would prove Dawn white

"I shall need no guard," replied Tom. "and I agree with you that you will need your men. I would prefer to spare the guard that it might re-enforce the protection to Dawn."

"She shall have the best protection the garrison affords," Judson promised.

"Now, how about this sacrifice?" inquired Tom anxiously. "At what hour, precisely, does it take place? And where?"

There was a slight pause. "Well," Judson said finally, "as far as I am able to gather, it will take place at the highest light of the moon—at their abominable Hill of Skulls."

"Hill of Skulls?" declared Tom. "with my facts?"

"Good luck," said Judson, extending his hand, which Tom wrung. "and God speed."

"Thank you, sir," said Tom, saluting. He started toward the door. "And pray for rain, Captain," Judson called out, his manner relaxing.

Pigeon was overjoyed at the assignment. In addition to serving Tom, he would be able to assist, in a minor way, to add to the discomfort of Shep, and if there was anything on earth that could give the Cockney greater joy he wasn't aware of it.

"I know every joint in Mombasa," he told Tom enthusiastically. "and we won't be in town ten minutes before I'll be able to tell you exactly which one she's at."

"I fervently hope so," said Tom. "Trust me," was Pigeon's assurance.

In the heat of the day they set off on the trail. As they crossed the richly wooded bridge near the Temple of Malungu where Tom had been assured by Shep that Dawn was a white girl, he felt himself fired by an overpowering crusading zeal. If he failed to find Mooda and Dawn suffered the death the natives had barbarically prescribed for her, he vowed he would not be responsible for the destruction he personally would wreak on the tribesmen.

"I have a feeling, Pigeon," he said after several minutes of silent reflection, "that if Dawn dies there is going to be a high mortality rate among the blacks."

"I got it," grinned the Cockney. "It" stipulated Tom, "I live."

Never able to work up any great relish for the African settlement where he had been so long a prisoner, Duke made his escape to Mombasa shortly after Colonel Judson's troops captured the garrison. It must be added that Johann's marriage to the unspeakable American Blink, served to hasten Duke's flight. Too impoverished to pay his passage to England, Duke contented himself with Mombasa.

With his pitiable funds, he wandered from grog shop to grog shop confining his visits to the place along the water front where he not only found his funds adequate, but also managed to encounter some little excitement. His favorite rendezvous was the Geng Lee Tavern, a lowly dive which attracted alike the Germans, French and English who made Mombasa their port of call.

The Tavern was situated on a water front street and as he sat over his porter he could watch the ships in the harbor. Arrival of a British boat was the occasion of a festival. From the crew he learned of events in England and, if he were lucky, caded quite a few mugs of porter.

Seated in this room one evening, debating the wisdom of returning to his miserable quarters in his present state of semi-sobriety or remaining to attain the full measure of intoxication, Duke was startled to hear a familiar voice upraised in song. It came from the dance hall, where a handful of entertainers performed for the seamen and their waterfront ladies. The singer's voice was a rich, if untrained, contralto, darkly suggestive of the jungle. Indeed, the songs were corruptions of the chants of the voodoo worshippers.

Rising, Duke sauntered to the door of the dance hall and discovered the owner of the voice to be Mooda. More arrogant than ever, she stood in the middle of the floor, the roysterers silent for once, held speechless by the brooding mournfulness of her song. Finished, she swept the group with a contemptuous glance, and entered the room where Duke was. She greeted him casually, manifesting no surprise to see him.

"You leave the settlement," she stated, rather than asked.

"Yes," returned the Duke with disgust. "What is there to keep me there? I left after Blink, the little tripe-hound, married Johann."

Mooda nodded. "I hear of it," she said. "You go to England, now?" Embarrassment settled on Duke. "Eventually," he countered. "It was originally my plan to escape from Africa and its countless horrors with the speed of a rising rocket. But of circumstances," he added sadly, upraising the hands to describe the inexorable force of circumstances, "have necessarily delayed me."

The black woman comprehended. "You have no money," she said. "Now, after all," protested Duke, striving for dignity by affixing his monocle to his eye, "it is not criminal to be temporarily out of funds. In times of war finances are unstable and I may say, difficult to transport. I daresay that throughout the civilized world many an English gentleman is distressed by circumstances over which he regrettably has no control."

Mooda's silent nod indicated that she agreed with Duke, however little she sympathized for the distressed English gentlemen throughout the civilized world.

"And you," continued Duke, "why did you leave the settlement?"

The woman grew agitated. "I run away," she said nervously. "I can not live at certain any longer."

"Quite understandable," Duke admitted, "but you were doing well enough there. And after Dawn became Thaba—"

"Don't speak of Dawn!" screamed Mooda. "Don't say her name!"

In Duke's astonishment his eye muscles relaxed and he dropped his monocle. It was dashed to bits on the floor. This diverted him from Mooda for the moment and after he had inspected the shattered glass and properly deplored the great disaster, he returned to her. She was again calm.

Stealthily Mooda peered about, then, drawing nearer to Duke spoke in a confidential whisper.

"Did you ever see a ghost?" she asked.

Duke almost upset his mug of porter at the unexpectedness of the question.

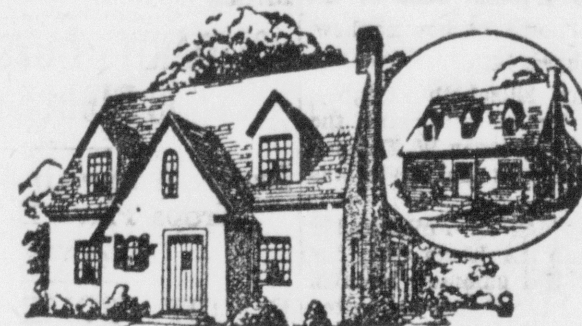

"Rather not!" he exclaimed. "Though heaven knows that wretched Africa is possibly full of them."

"I see one," Mooda confided. "You did? Where?"

"Right here in Geng Lee Tavern. He came every night."

This was too weird and spine-chilling a topic for Duke. He gulped his porter and loudly set up a call for more. These voodoo practices and superstitions always disturbed him. There was nothing like it in the placid England for which he so ardently longed.

Cultivation of Mind Brings Real Beauty

Hal Phye, Noted Metropolitan Artist, Sees the Eyes as Pivot of Beauty, Spokesman for the Soul.

By Alice Alden

Hal Phye thinks that the "beautiful but dumb" type is passing from the scene. For there has been such a plethora of it that it has even tired the tired business man, who is popularly credited with having created the demand for this easy type of beauty. And with this empty form of beauty is passing the soulless type of loveliness that is glamorous without being glorious, a beauty that demands a setting but does not create an atmosphere, a beauty that is luring but not lasting. This type of beauty, says Hal Phye, can never really be great, because it is too obvious and is too expressive of the shrewd and calculating mind functioning behind the smooth face and soft golden hair of the professional beauty and heart breaker.

Ever Changing Types

Yes, the beauty type is changing. But there are certain fundamentals that are essential. Like all artists, whether the media be the brush, the chisel or the camera, Mr. Phye insists that the facial construction must be definite, even bold. And the eyes must be the pivot of the expression. For if the eyes have "it" everything else will be forgotten in their vivid, compelling attraction. Eyes create individuality, they are the spokesmen for the soul, the character, the mind. For the rest—complexion, hair, features—this artist does not consider them of such importance, for he knows that art and the will to achieve a certain amount of beauty can, and does do wonders. And that is just why the average man has become both bewildered and tired by the endless parade of glorious girls and women that he finds not only on the screen and stage, but in the office, on the streets, in stores, everywhere. And so, astonishing as it may seem, standardized beauty has become commonplace and therefore boring.

Beauty, true beauty, lies in the eyes of the camera. And that is why so many women, who to the average eye seem quite ordinary types, emerge from the lens of the camera in a glamorous procession across the motion picture screen. And that is why the movies have developed new standards of beauty as well as an understanding and appreciation of the various ingredients that make up allure and loveliness in woman.

Hal Phye is one of the country's leading photographers, and is equally famous as a painter and sculptor. To him the study of beauty is a vital subject. He watches for beauty everywhere. It is as much his stock in trade as it is that of those women who have risen to fame by the ladder of their physical attractions, charm and grace.

Although he photographs theatrical types—he does most of the work on Florenz Ziegfeld's bevy of beauty—he is not especially keen about that type of loveliness.

It is too standardized, he thinks, many of these society women have cultivated their minds as well as their bodies, something that the average girl and professional beauty hardly ever thinks to do. She has clothes, the where-withal for correct grooming, and accessories, attractive backgrounds and settings, and yet she finds a multiplicity of interests that keep her interested and influence her intelligence to the advantage of her beauty. These women, coupled with certain professional models, represent the true ideals and cardinal points of real beauty. And Mr. Phye suggests that the girl who is striving after beauty should look to society rather than the stage and screen, and she will find poise, dignity, an expression of intelligence, all of which can and may be cultivated to advantage by any woman. Amongst his society sitters, Mr. Phye

ABOUT TO GIVE UP HOPE; THEN FOUND KONJOLA

Victim of Rheumatism Found at Last the Medicine He Should Have Had in First Place

MR. GEORGE GEREG

Here is good news for victims of rheumatism who may have the fear that there is no escape from the clutches of this punishing ailment. Read the grateful words of Mr. George Gereg, 161 South Main Street, Plains, Pa., who says:

"For a long time I suffered with rheumatism in my right leg, and I was about to come to the conclusion that I never could find relief; that the rheumatism had come to stay. The pains were terrible, and of all the medicines and treatments I tried not one did a bit of good. A friend recommended Konjola, and the first bottle helped me so much that I knew that I was on the right road. Day by day the pains became less severe and in three weeks they were gone. No wonder that Konjola has a million friends."

Konjola loses no time in showing results, yet a complete course of from six to eight bottles is strongly recommended.

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause." But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderly at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store. (Charles I. Bowen.—(Adv.)
